The fresh receipts of hogs today were about 1,400, and everything on sale sold at an early hour. The packers were auxious for good hogs and were ready buyers, taking the offerings as fast as they came in. Hogs sold strong and 5 cents higher. This market is getting in good shape with eastern markets. In nearly all cases the offerings sell at Kansas City prices or near it. The market is in a good condition and shippers will do well in shipping here now. The packers are running at a good capac ity and want good hogs. The market today is in a better condition than it ever has been. The market closed strong.

OLD AND NEW PHYSIC.

The Physician of Today Thinks More or Hygrene Than of Medicine.

In his method of treating the sick the practitioner of the old school had a lively sense of the value of medicines and of remedial substances generally. He cared little or nothing about hygiene. He let his nurses draw down the brinds of the windows in the sickroom, and make it a dark and dirty dungeon, and without the slightest compunction. He had no love for open windows, and, unless the weather

THE MEAN ADVANTAGES A YOUNG WOMAN TOOK TO STEAL Allowed a Servant to Se Dismissed Under Suspicion and a Year Later Tried

Some years ago several girls were gathered together for afternoon tea in the bouldoir of their hostess, a stately dame of the old regime, when to please her young guests the old lady had brought out many old time treasures in the way of gowns and jewels. Placing the latter in their J. O. DAVIDSON, Pres. H. O. Coolings V.P. JOHN DERST, Cashier. casket as the party broke up Mrs. S-turned the key in the lock and put the box away, neglecting to verify the casket until later in the evening; then, reproaching herself for her carelessness, she opened the case to see that nothing was missing. To her consternation she found that a very valuable ring was gone. Of course the most minute and thorough search of the room was made and every part of the old gowns carefully examined. All was in vain; the ring had disappeared and was never seen again. Deeming it useless, Mrs. - decided not to mention the matter to her young guests, fearing it might make them uncomfortable, and so the matter was dropped.

A few months later three of the party, including Mrs. S—, happened to be stopping together at a large country house on the Hudson. One morning when most of the house party were at breakfast their bostess came down rather late, looking very much worried. "I have had a most annoying loss," she said as she entered the "Two rings of considerable value have been taken from my room. At this season I always have my coffee early, and work for half an hour in my rose garden, leaving my rings on the ring stand on my dressing table. It is a careless habit, I know, but I have done so constantly, and most of the servants have been with us so long that I never felt that there was any danger. This morning I left them there as usual, but when I came back to dress for breakfast I found two of them gone." THE MAID LEAVES.

The event naturally caused great commotion in the house; the servants were interrogated and suspicion finally attached itself to a new French nurse who had lately entered the household. The theft, however, was not proved and she left, vowing vengeance. "You insult us, left, vowing vengeance. "You insult us, you examine our effects," she screamed in shrill anger. "But regard then in the trunks of ces dames; they can be voleurs as well as nous autres. But how wrong," thought the conscientious old lady, "to let the chance word of a dismissed servant influence me," and she felt that she had done wisely in not mentioning her own loss of the winter

One year later Mrs. S- visited a well known watering place, where she found Minnie stopping with some friends at the same hotel, and the same afternoon she encountered Josephine, the suspected French maid, walking with two pretty little children on the veranda. Stopping her these were almost inseparables from his as she passed, the girl poured forth an eager stream of entreaties. Read the good old books that have lived and held their own by the vitality of mat-ter and style that makes them standards. Don't read a lot of new books about the Bible; read the Bible, and then you will understand what you may afterward read about the Bible. Read Shakespeare, not controversies on Shakespeare; read Scots and Thackersy and Dickens and George Ellot. Do not be content with a short his-tory of literature that tells you their best works, and makes a few disconnected extracts, and tells you their standing, and what you should think of them. Read intelligently and with interest, and
